

To Whom It May Concern:

I am appalled to hear of the proposal for the Canada Post Corporation Strategic Review. The postal service has the reputation for delivering mail in a timely manner while providing the necessary security and safeguards needed to ensure public confidence.

Living in an age of technology has not abolished the need for reliable postal service. Deregulating the service would in all eventuality decrease service, and safety as well as increase postal rates.

Having moved to a very rural area, we rely on the postal service as an integral part of maintaining our connection with friends, family and personal business matters. Our mail comes three days a week, the Post Office is open three days a week for special postal needs and the sorting of mail truck deliveries. We are pleased with the service that exists as we can count on the reliability of the services provided.

What we have works great, deregulation would only create inefficiency.
