

Attention Review Panel:

In the past few weeks I have been speaking with friends, neighbours, co-workers and family about the CPC review.

I have noticed that most Canadian citizens are not familiar with the term deregulation. It is very confusing to people who are unaware of the laws that are in place to protect its citizens. When people are given the information regarding the implications of what deregulation does to our laws they are outraged.

2 years ago I toured Colombia. Public sector workers travelled to one of the most dangerous countries in the world to investigate the mass privatization and deregulation of public services. The one thing I felt was most compelling is that even in the face of great danger the people of Colombia still insisted on public hearings and trials of the constitutionality of this privatization and deregulation of its public services.

The people of Canada have not been given the opportunity to fully understand the impact of this study. This is not a question of empathy but rather education. The laws are in place to protect its citizens. The Canada Post Act is law.

Thank you for your consideration to protect Canada's citizens.
